COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

Tucked inside Hardaway Hall, “The Cube” is a series of labs that offer 3-D prototyping to all students, not just engineering majors. Doug Cannon, manager of “The Cube,” has 12 students at all times who are actively using equipment in the lab. Interested students write a proposal about the project, which Cannon reviews. He then guides students through the 3-D prototyping and printing processes.

“The students do everything on their own, they figure out the measurements and the specifics using our computers and I help guide them along their journey,” Cannon said. “Any student can participate. The Cube is meant to give students the tools they need to create something useful for the future.”

Students have made script A keychains, braces for athletes, fishing equipment and more. Cannon also has the only 3-D printed model of his brain, which helps students visualize how detailed the printers can be.

COLLEGE OF HUMAN ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCES

The China Retail Study Tour seeks students in the department of clothing, textiles and interior design the chance to study abroad every two years. The program takes students to Beijing and Shanghai, and includes visits to design schools, studios, corporate headquarters, garment factories and major retailers. Students are also given the opportunity to explore historic landmarks, such as the Great Wall of China and the Forbidden City.

"Students develop a greater understanding of China's society, Chinese people, Chinese consumers and China's apparel industry during the trip," said Dr. Xiao (Michelle) Tong, director of the China Retail Study Tour and associate professor in the department of clothing, textiles and interior design.

Aside from the cultural experience that students gain on this trip, the tour can also spark interest in international business and help students develop cross-cultural communication skills to assist them in their future careers.
