Growing up in Valley Head, Alabama (population 500), my fall Saturdays were spent cleaning house and listening to Crimson Tide football through our home’s Philco Hi-Fi. The idea that I would ever have the chance to graduate from The University of Alabama, much less that my siblings, my children, and my nieces and nephew would as well, was beyond a dream—and there are two reasons why that dream is now a reality.

First, came the hard work and sacrifice of my parents, James and Doris Carmichael. No one in our family had ever graduated from college and they were determined the tradition would start with their children. I am thankful to have grown up with such wonderful parents.

The second key factor was the availability of scholarships and financial aid from the Capstone. Continuing to provide this help is now a major mission of UA’s National Alumni Association.

How important is the work of our NAA? During the 2017–18 academic year, the NAA awarded more than $5 million in annual scholarships to a record breaking 2,704 students. The NAA boasts more than 32,000 active members and has 107 chapters across the country. This continuous growth has helped tremendously by giving more students scholarships.

Alongside the scholarships awarded to thousands of students every year, the Capstone offers hundreds of programs for students to participate in and gain experience before graduation. This book highlights just a few programs across campus, but it illustrates all the moving parts that help students find themselves and their passions in life.

It is also my privilege to acknowledge the hard work and excellence of our dedicated NAA administration, staff and executive committee—the countless phone calls, emails, texts and meetings these people are responsible for and carry through are amazing.

Thank you so very much.

I am Linda Thomas, 2018–19 president of our National Alumni Association, and I am proud to be a graduate of this great school. The University of Alabama is, of course, where legends are made, but it is also where dreams are realized. And I know that for a fact.

Roll Tide!

Linda Carmichael Thomas, BS ’72, MS ’82
2018–19 President of the National Alumni Association
Scholarship Recipients

The following is a list of first-time recipients of alumni scholarship awards for the 2017–18 academic year. These scholarships are funded from an operating budget composed of contributions to the Alumni Fund for membership in the National Alumni Association and by earnings generated from investment of an extensive endowment program of restricted contributions. Students continuing on renewal scholarships are not listed. Hometowns are in Alabama unless otherwise noted.

Tucked inside Hardaway Hall, “The Cube” is a series of labs that offer 3-D prototyping to all students, not just engineering majors. Doug Cannon, manager of “The Cube,” has 12 students at all times who are actively using equipment in the lab. Interested students write a proposal about the project, which Cannon reviews. He then guides students through the 3-D prototyping and printing processes.

“The students do everything on their own, they figure out the measurements and the specifics using our computers and I help guide them along their journey,” Cannon said. “Any student can participate. The Cube is meant to give students the tools they need to create something useful for the future.”

Students have made script A keychains, braces for athletes, fishing equipment and more. Cannon also has the only 3-D printed model of his brain, which helps students visualize how detailed the printers can be.
The China Retail Study Tour seeks students in the department of clothing, textiles and interior design the chance to study abroad every two years. The program takes students to Beijing and Shanghai, and includes visits to design schools, studios, corporate headquarters, garment factories and major retailers. Students are also given the opportunity to explore historic landmarks, such as the Great Wall of China and the Forbidden City.

“Students develop a greater understanding of China’s society, Chinese people, Chinese consumers and China’s apparel industry during the trip,” said Dr. Xiao (Michelle) Tong, director of the China Retail Study Tour and associate professor in the department of clothing, textiles and interior design.

Aside from the cultural experience that students gain on this trip, the tour can also spark interest in international business and help students develop cross-cultural communication skills to assist them in their future careers.

Due to the outstanding generosity of our donors, the lists of Alumni Heritage Scholarship and Alumni Scholar Award recipients are too lengthy for inclusion in the printed booklet. These recipients may be found online in a full scholarship listing at alumni.ua.edu/scholarships.
The theme of this year’s Honor Roll Book is “Putting the Pieces Together.” Throughout this publication, programs from each of the colleges at the Capstone are highlighted. Each program at the University is worthy of recognition, but there are so many pieces of the puzzle integral to the unique experience students encounter while studying at the Capstone that the pages of this book would be filled two times over.

As The University of Alabama has grown to the largest student population in its history, it has afforded students the opportunity to tap into vast resources and experiences. As students piece their puzzle together, they can find a smaller community within the larger campus that appeals to their interests, passions and aspirations. Opportunities abound all over campus—socially, culturally and academically.

Every student’s experience while attending UA will be different. You and I can remember our time on campus vividly, but the pieces all came together in different ways. We can agree, however, that our lives were changed while here, our futures formed and our spirits shaped into the people we are today.

The University of Alabama’s National Alumni Association is an integral piece of our alma mater. The National Alumni Association provides a way for you, our loyal alumni and friends, to remain engaged in and informed about our beloved university. I hope it stirs vivid memories of your time here on campus, and makes you proud of what this institution has become. I hope you always know that your membership in the National Alumni Association plays a key role in the many successes The University of Alabama enjoys. The programs highlighted in this booklet are made stronger because of you.

Your involvement helps current students piece their own puzzle together. I hope you will never forget what your support to the National Alumni Association means to countless students. I know I say it in each annual letter—but it bears repeating—your annual contributions are literally transforming young lives, as well as future generations. Due to your generosity, the National Alumni Association has, as of this writing, 556 scholarship endowments with a corpus value of over $46.1 million. As 2018–19 NAA President Linda Thomas mentioned, this will allow the NAA to award over $5 million to more than 2,700 students this academic year alone.

I want to take this opportunity to personally thank you for your support of the National Alumni Association and The University of Alabama. Together, we can continue to attract the best and brightest students and assure our place among the finest universities in the nation. We publish this booklet each year to honor you. Your member contributions totaled $2,236,914 in 2017. The following list recognizes our alumni and friends who gave unrestricted donations of $100 or more during 2017.

Thank you for your continued support and Roll Tide!

Calvin J. Brown, BS ’81, MA ’83

Simulation has been shown to be as effective as traditional clinical practice in preparing nursing students for their future careers. The Capstone College of Nursing offers a unique way for nursing students to gain valuable field experience. Its simulation program provides students the opportunity to work with patients in a safe environment. The catch, however, is that the patients are actually robotic mannequins programmed to behave like humans.

The simulated patients represent a variety of ages, and they range from those suffering from chronic illnesses to patients in critical condition. The obstetric simulator can even deliver a baby. As the nursing students advance in their studies, they may take on multiple patients at once, which teaches students how to properly manage time and produce the best possible outcome.

“Simulation has been shown to be as effective as traditional clinical practice in preparing nursing students for their future careers,” said Dr. Megan Lippe, assistant professor and simulation specialist.

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

The University of Alabama School of Social Work students are offered a unique opportunity to get real world professional experience in policy and advocacy. Students from UA and its program partner, Ohio State University, travel to Washington, D.C., for two days to apply their knowledge of policy and advocacy by meetings with members of Congress and their staff.

“We train our students to do three-minute policy presentations on specific bills before Congress, along with a one page fact sheet on everything included on the bill,” said Carroll Phelps, instructor and field coordinator of the Washington, D.C., internship programs.

Students are given real world bills currently before Congress to advocate to government representatives.

“Students go into those offices, meet with a member of Congress or staffers, and they come back into our final session excited that their advocacy made an impact, saying ‘I did it! The member agreed to vote for the bill,’” Phelps said.

"They do most of the work of Engage Tuscaloosa—the ideas, the labor, the organization, the communications—I get to advise, ask questions to encourage and direct and then watch their success,” said Vicki Holt, coordinator of educational outreach in the Honors College and director for Engage Tuscaloosa. “It allows our students to apply themselves to issues in a community and see what can be done and the differences they can make.”

“We train students to be able to not just find sources that we make available through library resources, but to evaluate information that they find—you know, it’s difficult to ascertain authority in this crazy information environment that currently exists in the modern world,” Pearce said.

program. Those students will put together a scene, a monologue or a musical theater number to showcase their talents to agents. Feedback. Graduate and undergraduate students who participate in the program will start their training in the fall for the spring window into what the rest of their lives will be.”

“The experience is the capstone of their time here,” Panitch said. “Whether something comes out of it or not, it’s a small window into what the rest of their lives will be.”

The two-day event offers students a first-hand experience of what talent agents are looking for and students gain valuable feedback. Graduate and undergraduate students who participate in the program will start their training in the fall for the spring program. Those students will put together a scene, a monologue or a musical theater number to showcase their talents to agents.

Jennifer Hayes, program manager for UAEC, “No two students will have the same experience with UAEC, given the options they can take. One of the most attractive aspects of UAEC is the flexibility and individual academic path each student can take,” said Hayes. “Students can continue into the summer after high school graduation. UA Early College (UAEC) is an opportunity for students to begin their college career while still in high school, earning up to 30 credit hours by taking college courses online or on campus. Students can begin as early as the summer after ninth grade and have enjoyed the variety of classes offered after participating in UAEC.”

Honor Rolls 2017–18 | 35
The Three Minute Thesis (3MT) is a graduate research competition that gives UA graduate students the opportunity to present their thesis topic to an audience and a panel of judges. As opposed to other research presentations, which range from specialization conferences to department-wide presentations, the 3MT gets the students in front of the public—a larger and broader audience.

The judges of the competition, which include the previous year’s winner, decide which student explains their research in the most clear and compelling way, and the program teaches students how to engage and educate others in a simple and concise manner.

“Even though The University of Alabama has a very strong undergraduate program, the graduate students are exceptional, and they are a large part of this University,” said Cori Perdue, director of graduate school programs. “They’re teaching and they’re doing research and they’re doing service, and the 3MT gets them out in front of the public. It gives the undergraduates and the faculty and the staff a way to connect with their research and just learn about all these different things that people are doing. And then it gives the graduate students a spotlight in an exciting way for them to show the hundreds of hours of things they’ve done in their labs to the rest of the University.”

CULVERHOUSE COLLEGE OF COMMERCE

The Culverhouse College of Commerce offers the program Culverhouse Connections to the students within the college. Culverhouse Connections is a three-component student-enrichment program that includes mentoring, professional development programs and corporate visits. The largest part of this program is the mentoring program, said Lynsey Dill, programming manager for Culverhouse Connections. Through mentoring, students are linked to industry professionals to gain knowledge, experience growth and develop their professional network.

The program also provides professional development workshops and corporate visits so students can connect with a diverse range of industries and begin to figure out what career path is best suited for them.

“To see that transition—from coming in as a student, who honestly needs a little bit of work, to a very confident senior who is ready to interview and start their career with a company they’ve always dreamed of working for—it’s rewarding to see that transition,” Dill said.
Brook Hubner, director of Medical Student Affairs. “Students also become exposed to the broader scope of the medical profession. The program allows students to build relationships with faculty and patients and get feedback from faculty over time,” said medicine, pediatrics, OB/GYN, psychiatry, neurology and internal medicine).

A unique component of the Primary Care Track is the third-year training which takes place in a longitudinal integrated clerkship model. In this model, students work with faculty over six, eight or 12 months in all core clinical disciplines (surgery, family medicine, pediatrics, OB/GYN, psychiatry, neurology and internal medicine).

The program allows students to build relationships with faculty and patients and get feedback from faculty over time,” said Brook Hubner, director of Medical Student Affairs. “Students also become exposed to the broader scope of the medical profession. Students tell us when they learn in this way, they feel like they are an authentic member of the health care team.”

46 | National Alumni Association
The College of Communication and Information Sciences’ Industry Immersion program forges relationships by taking driven undergraduates to big-city markets and facilitating meetings with successful alumni and industry leaders during university breaks. Students have the opportunity to meet C&IS alumni and current employers in their chosen career trajectory. The program was founded in 2015 and has continued to evolve into a targeted networking opportunity.

“Industry Immersion is a student-driven experience, it is tailored to their academic profiles,” said Neil Adams, C&IS coordinator of employer relations. “Networking opportunities facilitated through the program are based on students who are selected.”

Each Industry Immersion group is comprised of eight to 14 students who apply and interview for a chance to participate. C&IS faculty and staff travel with students to lead trips and offer advice guiding them through the process of making a favorable impression on potential industry contacts.

Although several colleges are involved in different aspects of the county’s medical center, the College of Education’s main focus is the cardiopulmonary rehabilitation unit. The College helps fulfill the various needs of the unit, including equipment needs and nutritional information.

“We are more or less just trying to help people get through the program,” said Jonathan Wingo, associate professor and chair of the department of kinesiology. “We are helping to facilitate the people that work there full-time and getting the people through the program by giving them the resources they need—this equipment, the dietician, and basically trying to enhance the experience of the patients.”

Colleges within The University of Alabama work with Pickens County to enhance the county’s medical center and healthcare options. The partnership program, which was initiated by the College of Community Health Sciences and works with the College of Education and the School of Social Work, is funded by grants that allow UA to assist with the needs of the Pickens County community.

The School of Law

University of Alabama law students are guaranteed a chance to spend a semester working for real clients in one of six law clinics through the Law School Clinical Program. The six clinics include children's rights, civil law, criminal defense, domestic violence law, elder law and mediation law.

The program has been in place since the first law clinic was opened at the University in 1970. Since then it has grown, educating up to 60 students each semester. Third-year law students are given the chance to work with clients from the initial interview through fact gathering into the trial and even appeal.

“The students get to be lawyers in a safe environment where faculty are there to supervise and advise to ensure clients get the best representation,” said Yuri Linetsky, interim director of clinical programs and director of the civil law clinic. “They see theory put into practice when working in the clinics. They see the process through to the end with their clients.”

Capstone Alumni Legacy Society
The Capstone Alumni Legacy Society is a scholarship endowment program using life insurance as the means.

Not all deferred-gift donors are listed; some wish to remain anonymous.
The National Alumni Association expresses its sincere gratitude to all donors for their generous support.

Ways to Give

A gift to the Alumni Fund of The University of Alabama’s National Alumni Association can take many forms. It can be:
• a gift of cash
• a gift of stocks, bonds, real estate or other property (art, books, etc.)
• a corporate matching gift
• a gift through your will or living trust
• a charitable trust or other life income plan
• a named beneficiary in your retirement, insurance policy or certificate of deposit

You can also use the above options to create an endowment gift to the National Alumni Association in support of its scholarship program. Perhaps the most rewarding aspect of establishing an endowed scholarship fund is that it will allow you to directly accomplish your goals in giving while helping the University achieve its institutional initiatives through the NAA. The principal is invested in the UA System Pooled Endowment Fund for safe growth over time. The annual endowment income from this investment enables the Alumni Association to award scholarships to qualified recipients each year, according to the terms agreed upon by you and the association. Scholarship endowments may be established by individuals, businesses or alumni chapters, and gifts may be given over a period of five years. You can also add to your endowment, beyond the minimum funding level, through lifetime gifts and through a beneficiary designation in your estate plan.
